Lyran rule, has Spitzer's loyalties more than a little conflicted. For the time being, however, he appears to have reconciled his ideal goal by considering the Stormhammers' agenda a short-term step toward the greater goal. What will happen if Kelswa-Steiner's agenda turns out to be far more long-term than Spitzer hopes, however, is open to debate.

Franz Spitzer is a third-generation member of the Lyran Rangers. His family has served with the former Republican militia for Skye ever since the unit was known as the Fourth Skye Rangers. A native of Skye, Spitzer is understandably proud of his family heritage and its devotion to the people of his homeworld. For himself, Franz believes in the promise of a free and independent Federation of Skye, in keeping with the historical attitudes of the old Fourth Rangers. For this reason, Jasek Kelswa-Steiner's position, which advocates a return to

The original Condor hovertanks featured a mix of medium lasers and a single autocannon for their principal firepower, but the advancement of weapons technology during the Clan Wars made possible several refits that dramatically improved their overall effectiveness. Chief among them involved swapping the old internal combustion engine for a fusion plant, and adding a heavy long-range missile rack for improved punch at a distance. Though slower than its older cousins, this Condor model still possesses the speed and maneuverability to challenge any opponent in the field.

LC1056-327J was built just before the Jihad for use by the Fourth Skye Rangers, and played a role in practically every engagement in defense of Skye. The vehicle became part of The Republic's militia, along with the rest of the Fourth's survivors, who followed Devlin Stone after the war. Franz Spitzer has named this vehicle "Skye Fire" to advertise his Free Skye loyalties.
